INSTRUCTIONS

This document is about informed consent. It will tell you about microblading. It will outline its risks, and other treatment options.

It is important that you read this whole document carefully. Please initial each page. Doing so means you have read the page. Signing the consent agreement means that you agree to the surgery that you have talked about with your microblading technician.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Microblading is a long-lasting makeup procedure. It can boldly correct or fully restore the appearance of an eyebrow. Eyebrow microblading puts pigment under the top layer of the skin with a special device. A machine is not used for this.

OTHER TREATMENTS

Other options are shaping, tinting, waxing, preening, stenciling, using brow extensions, and/or brow hair transplants. These have their own risks and potential issues.

RISKS OF MICROBLADING

All procedures have some risk. It is important that you know these risks. You must also understand other issues that might come up during or after the procedure. Every procedure has its limits. Choosing to have a procedure means comparing the risks and benefits. Most patients do not face problems, but you should talk about them with your microblading technician. Make sure you know all possible risks of microblading.

SPECIFIC RISKS OF MICROBLADING

Bruising:

You may see bruising after the procedure. It should not last more than a day or two.

Infection:

It is rare, but you may get an infection after the procedure. If you do, you may need more treatment. This could include antibiotics, time in the hospital, or surgery. You need to tell your professional skin technician about any infection. This could be ingrown toenails, insect bites, tooth problems, or urinary infections. An infection in another part of your body can lead to an infection in the treated area.

Erythema (Skin Redness):

Your skin may turn red near the treated area after injections. It may stay red for a few days after the procedure.

Skin Discoloration/Swelling:

You may see swelling after the treatment. The skin at or near the procedure site can look lighter or darker than the skin around it. It is not common but swelling and skin discoloration can last a long time. In rare cases, it may be permanent.

Allergic Reactions:

In rare cases, patients have allergic reactions to the pigment, topical preparations, or injected agents. Such reactions may need more treatment. You should tell your skin technician of prior allergic reactions.

Poor Results:

You can expect good results. However, there is no guarantee for the results. The body is not symmetrical. Almost everyone has some level of unevenness. This may not be visible before the treatment. For example, one side of your face may be a little larger. One side could sag more than the other. If you have more realistic ideas about the treatment, the results will look better to you. Some patients do not reach their goals. It is not the fault of the professional skin technician or the treatment. You may not like the results. Unwanted results may NOT improve with more treatment.

DISCLAIMER

They also discuss other treatment options, including not having surgery. However, informed consent documents can't cover everything. Your plastic surgeon or microblading technician may give you more or different information. This may be based on the facts of your case.

Informed consent documents are not meant to define or serve as the standard of medical care. Standards of medical care are determined based on the facts involved in an individual case. They may change with advances in science and technology. They can also change with the way doctors practice medicine.

It is important that you read the above information carefully and get all your questions answered before signing the consent agreement on the next page.
